

COVID-19 Advice for Conducting Funerals

Issue Date	Version	Issued by
16 th June 2021	5.9	The House of Bishops Recovery Group
Updates from version 5.8: in line with updated Government guidance on wakes from the 21st June we have updated the numbers who can attend. Please remember all other measures at step 3 of the Government roadmap for places of worship still apply.

The Recovery Group has been set up to support the Church of England as government guidance changes through the COVID-19 pandemic. This document has been prepared with information available by the issue date. It will be kept under review and updated as the situation develops, with each update issued as a new version. The current version will always be available to download from the Church of England website via the Coronavirus FAQs page.

This document should be read in conjunction with ‘Opening cathedral and church buildings to the public’.

Pastoral Introduction

Funerals bring to the fore one of the most urgent, difficult and often cruellest tensions that exist between the realities of human need and the demands that must be met if the current COVID-19 outbreak is to be brought under control. When a loved one dies, our natural human desire is to be surrounded by others in order to experience their comfort and support through presence, touch, prayer and a common acknowledge of grief and loss. It is also known that during the current outbreak of COVID-19, the very gatherings and contact desired by those who grieve are precisely what must be avoided, or at the very least restricted, if transmission of the virus is to be brought under control.

This tension may not be readily acknowledged by those suffering from the bewilderment, pain and agony of grief. The challenge for those leading funerals is with gentleness and compassion to enable those who mourn to receive comfort in the hope of the resurrection and ways through the realities of the current situation. This both acknowledges their needs as people who grieve and the needs of the whole community in keeping COVID-19 under control. This poses a huge challenge for those charged with taking funerals. Where possible, the expectations and needs of those who mourn should be satisfied, while at the same time holding in place the good practice needed to enable the safety of the whole community at this time.

The aim of this advice is to support clergy and others who take funerals. Every parish and each church building is different and there can be no single solution. Parishes and clergy will need to assess how, and in some cases whether, they are able to conduct funerals safely in the light of the advice below. This advice follows government guidance which may change and, if so, will be updated accordingly.

Things to think about before the service

1. How many people can attend?

Government guidance permits as many people to attend church premises for a funeral as the covid secure capacity of the building allows. This is subject to the church carrying out a risk assessment and taking all reasonable measures to limit the risk of transmission of coronavirus. See more detail in the COVID-19: guidance for managing a funeral during the coronavirus pandemic.

When determining numbers you may want to consider:

- In step 3 groups of 6, or larger groups where everyone present is from the same two households (or linked support bubbles), can sit together. Everyone else will need to observe 2 metres (6ft or 3 steps) physical distancing.
- People attending a gathering in church must not mingle unless they are from the same two households (or linked support bubbles).
- the number of people that a minister feels they can effectively 'manage' during a service.

We recommend strongly that discussions with the family and funeral director cover the need to keep numbers within government guidance and that clergy and funeral directors agree responsibilities in advance to ensure good stewarding of the funeral on the day. Where possible, clergy should be free to concentrate on conducting the service and providing pastoral care with the funeral director assuming responsibilities for other aspects of the funeral.

2. What if no family or friends can attend?

Where family relatives or friends are unable to attend a funeral service, ministers can still take a funeral. Remote participation should be considered, for example, via live streaming, for those who wish to be there but are unable.

3. Can we have the organist and/or verger attending?

Yes, an organist and those essential for assisting with the service can attend, but numbers should be kept to a minimum.

4. What about those who may be personally self-isolating or have symptoms?

Anyone who is showing symptoms of coronavirus (COVID-19) (a new continuous cough, a high temperature or loss of taste and smell) or who has tested positive for it is permitted to attend but is strongly advised not attend the funeral due to the risk that they pose to others.

Remote participation should be considered instead, for example by live streaming. Failing this, a recording could be made which can be sent to anyone unable to attend after the service. Where no audio/video link can be achieved, ministers may be able to provide an order of service, either by email or post.

5. How can I communicate with the bereaved to discuss the service etc?

Any interaction with the bereaved should be done safely; this may mean by telephone or video link. It is important not to share documents, books, photos etc.

6. What if I can't offer the traditional funeral service?

Any changes to the normal service should be explained by the officiant to the family. Consider whether a memorial service could be held at some point in the future, which is an opportunity for more people to come together once Government guidance permits.

Managing the church

Please read the guidance contained within Opening cathedrals and church buildings to the public and Advice for conducting public worship which can be found here.

7. Should face coverings be worn?

In England, face coverings are required by law in places of worship, and in other public indoor settings. There are valid exemptions for some individuals and groups to not wear a face covering (see our guidance on face coverings for details).

In particular, those who are officiating at services and presiding at Holy Communion, and those who assist them (for instance by reading, preaching, or leading prayers) do not always need to wear a face covering, although one should be worn especially if physical distancing cannot be maintained. This exemption does not apply to worshippers, who should wear face coverings consistent with the requirements for any other public space.

Government guidance indicates some health, age, or equality reasons for which people may not be expected to wear face coverings. We encourage clergy and ministers to be sensitive to the needs of those who rely on lip reading, facial expressions, or clear sound.

8. What about cleaning the church?

Parishes should ensure that processes are in place to allow a suitable time to appropriately clean the area in which the service has taken place both before and after each service, paying attention to frequently touched objects and surfaces, using regular cleaning products. Guidance on cleaning churches is available here.

9. What about mourners who are self-isolating due to a possible case of coronavirus (COVID-19) in their household?

Key mourners of the deceased person may include those who are self-isolating due to another member of the household being unwell with symptoms of coronavirus (COVID-19). Where the funeral is scheduled before the period of household isolation has been completed (14 days from the first person in that household showing symptoms) mourners who are self-isolating should be facilitated to attend.

Mourners who are from a household that is self-isolating should:

- not attend if they have any symptoms of COVID-19, even if these are very mild
- maintain a distance of at least 2 metres (3 steps) between themselves and others.
- advise the other mourners that they are otherwise still within the 14-day isolation period, and ensure that they do not attend at the same time as another mourner who may be clinically vulnerable or clinically extremely vulnerable
- only break self-isolation when attending the funeral and otherwise continue to self-isolate
- practise strict hand and respiratory hygiene:
- wash their hands more often than usual with soap and water for at least 20 seconds, or use a hand sanitiser
- avoid touching their eyes, nose, and mouth
- cover their coughs or sneezes. Guidance for households with possible coronavirus infection is available

Mourners who are from a household or support bubble that is self-isolating must wear a face covering by law when attending indoor places of worship, crematoria and burial ground chapels unless exempt for health, disability or other reasons (see our guidance on face coverings for details).

10. What about mourners who are extremely clinically vulnerable?

Mourners who are in an extremely clinically vulnerable group should be facilitated to attend, should they decide to do so.

People who are clinically extremely vulnerable should have received a letter telling them they are in this group or been told by their GP. Mourners who are in an extremely clinically vulnerable group have been advised that they should minimise their contact with others for their personal protection. However, they may decide to attend a funeral despite the additional risk this poses to them and should be facilitated to do so.

They are not advised to attend a funeral if there are others attending who are self-isolating due to another member of the household being unwell with symptoms of coronavirus, as they could be incubating disease. Mourners who are extremely clinically vulnerable should follow the general social distancing advice for the clinically vulnerable mourners and should maintain a distance of 2 metres away from others as a minimum.

Actions to reduce their risk of infection could include:

- advising other attendees that there is an extremely clinically vulnerable person attending and reiterating the need to stay at home if they are unwell, and to be respectful of the vulnerable person's need to avoid close contact at any point
- advising the mourner to travel to the venue via the safest route possible, preferably in a car by themselves, or with someone from their household
- considering the additional risk involved if attending the funeral requires travelling by public transport
- ensuring that mourners who are in a clinically vulnerable group do not attend the same ceremony as mourners who are in household isolation

Mourners who are clinically vulnerable or clinically extremely vulnerable should always adhere to rigorous hand and respiratory hygiene measures, but particularly while out of the home environment. Hand sanitiser or sanitising wipes should be used regularly while outside of the home.

During the Service

11. Can we have singing and music?

- Professional performances can take place, and while there is no limit on the number of professional performers that can perform, the number should be determined by how many the venue can safely accommodate with social distancing measures in place between the performers and congregation. Performances should follow the guidelines as set out in the performing arts guidance.
- Amateur choirs, bands, or musicians may also perform in a group of up to 6 indoors. Outdoors, they may perform in multiple groups of up to 30.
- Communal (congregational) singing should not take place.
- People should avoid singing, shouting, raising voices and/or playing music at a volume that makes normal conversation difficult or that may encourage shouting. This is important to mitigate the potential for increased risk of transmission - particularly from droplets and aerosol transmission.

Please see Government guidance on places of worship and on Performing Arts for more information.

12. What should clergy do in terms of their own personal hygiene?

Clergy should remain mindful of their own personal hygiene, sanitising/washing their hands before and after the service and again after the committal and of the use of a face covering while indoors for the service.

13. Can we use church hymn books, bibles etc?

The use of communal Bibles or hymn books should be avoided. Orders of service could be placed on pews before the service and then taken away by mourners or safely disposed of.

14. Can we shake hands; can I touch the bereaved as a gesture of comfort?

Guidance on meeting friends and family emphasise personal responsibility rather than government rules. Instead of instructing you to stay 2m apart from anyone you don't live with, you will be encouraged to exercise caution and consider the guidance on risks associated with COVID-19 and actions you can take to help keep you and your loved ones safe. Remember that the risks of close contact may be greater for some people than others and in some settings and circumstances, there will be specific guidance that you will need to follow even when you are with friends and family.

15. What about a wake?

Yes these may take place before or following the funeral. The number permitted to attend has increased to the same number as for the funeral. This number applies both indoors and outdoors and does not include anyone working at the event.

16. What about laundry, including robes and vestments?

All items should be washed in accordance with the manufacturer's instructions, using the warmest water setting while allowing time for them to dry items completely. Vestments that cannot be washed should be hung up and left for 48 hours before use if more than one person will be using them.

17. Can we still bury ashes?

Yes, with the same limits on numbers as for an act of worship outside. If someone has been advised to self-isolate by NHS Test and Trace they must not break their isolation to attend otherwise this would be a legal offence and they may be fined.
